

TELECOMMUTING POLICY FOR FACULTY

The Division recognizes the value of telecommuting for both the Division and employees. Telecommuting is an opportunity for an employee to perform their job at their primary residence or other approved specific location rather than at a regular office location. Telecommuting is intended to create flexible work arrangements that serve both the needs of the employee and their work unit, with the understanding that such work arrangements will ensure the continued efficiency and effectiveness of the operations of the Division and does not impair the delivery of services to staff, clients, and the public.

I. Definition

Telecommuting is a voluntary work arrangement, mutually agreed upon by the Division and an employee which allows the employee to work at a primary residence or other approved specific location for all, or part, of their regular workweek. Telecommuting is not an employee's right, benefit or requirement, but rather a work arrangement that can be terminated by the Division or employee at any time with reasonable advance notice. The Division has the right to refuse to enter into a telecommuting arrangement with any employee. The denial or termination of a telecommuting arrangement will not serve as a basis for filing a grievance or an appeal under the Division's Grievance Policy, PMGS 09-2.

The policy includes the approval of employees to telecommute under the following categories:

1. Periodic or intermittent (e.g., for a special, short-term project ;). This arrangement is one that occurs seasonally, repeats during peak times or occurs occasionally due to fluctuations in agency needs. Such arrangements require documentation, but not a formal written agreement. If a Department Head approves of this periodic or intermittent work from a primary residence or other approved specific location, the Telecommuting Approval form must be completed by the Department Head and sent to Human Resources;
2. Temporary, emergency. This would allow employee to telecommute due to medical emergency (short term illness), reasonable accommodation for ADA purposes, or some other type of crisis. If a Department Head approves of this type of telecommuting, the Telecommuting Approval form must be completed by the Department Head and sent to Human Resources. If an arrangement is being considered for ADA purposes to afford a reasonable accommodation, the Division's Affirmative Action Office must be consulted before any arrangements are made. The ADA Coordinator also must approve before any working from a primary residence or other approved specific location agreements can be approved as a reasonable accommodation.

This policy will not permit employees to work at any other locations than their primary residence or other approved specific location.¹

II. Eligibility

In general, this policy pertains to faculty. To be eligible, an employee must have documented performance evaluations that demonstrate sustained high performance. No employee will be eligible if the employee has received a disciplinary action within the last three (3) years preceding the request to telecommute, a demonstrated attendance problem or documented poor performance. An employee with less than one (1) year service in the department will not be eligible for regular or periodic categories. The “one (1) year service” requirement may be waived by the appropriate Associate Vice-President supported by written justification for such waiver.

The following should be considered when evaluating a request to telecommute:

- The employee approved to telecommute must be able to perform the essential functions of their job;
- The employee has demonstrated sustained high performance, and the supervisor believes that the employee can maintain the expected quantity and quality of work while at a primary residence or other approved specific location;
- The employee’s current assignments do not require frequent supervision, direction or input from others who are on-site;
- The quality of service can be maintained for staff, faculty, and the public;
- The employee’s position does not require the employee’s physical presence to interact with faculty, students, staff and/ or the public or supervisor others on a daily basis; and
- The employee’s job has clearly identified and measurable performance objectives.

Working from a primary residence or other approved specific location may not be suitable for all employees and/or positions, therefore, departments may implement based upon specific criteria consistently applied throughout the department. Telecommuting requests may be denied if approval would leave the department short-staffed. Human Resources will determine those positions that are not eligible to telecommute.

¹ An alternative work location other than an employee’s primary home residence may be approved by the appropriate Associate Vice President with written justification on a case-by-case basis.

III. Guidelines
